SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the DOCK COMPANY'S ESTABLISHMENTS at the above Port afford every facility for Repairing and Sparring Vessels, Cleaning and Painting Iron Ships, and Repair and Refit of

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz.—ENGINEERS, BLACKSMITH, and SHIPWRIGHTS.

The Company keep on hand Copper and Metal Sheathing, Spars, Timber, Paints for Iron Vessels, and all material for Dockyard use.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels repairing to discharge them.

Good Quarters for Officers of ships under repair in the Dock.

tf 2938 Amoy, 10th December, 1867.

NOTICE.

THE Undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of vessels discharging at this port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their Wharves at New Harbour.

With the assistance of steam cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick godowns on the wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen, are avoided by vessels using the wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises, and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

HONGKONG, JULY 4TH, 1868.

THE naval expedition which was undertaken the other day by the Hongkong police, in the tug-boat Fame, certainly suggests one use which might reasonably be made of the money to be allotted to the improvement of the police. It would scarcely be straining the permission accorded by the SECRETARY OF STATE, if the police should be improved by the purchase, for their use, of a small gunboat, in which such raids on the pirates as may seem desirable from time to time might be undertaken without unnecessary risk. To let a few police go out in an utterly unarmed boat, to attack with rifles alone a pirate junk, carrying ten or fourteen large guns very likely, seems to us relying more than is prudent upon the élan which they would no doubt display in an engagement. In this case referred to, all the naval gunboats were unavailable at the moment,—some were away, some out of commission, and some repairing,—so that when information was received concerning a large pirate junk that had been seen in the neighbourhood, the only thing to be done was for the police to go out and look after her, in any sort of craft they could raise for the purpose. The only thing, indeed, except letting the pirate alone for once, which might perhaps have been the most prudent course.

The information concerning the whereabouts of pirates is generally obtained through the police, and although the usual promptitude of the naval authorities in sending out a gunboat whenever there is a motive for doing so, cannot be praised too highly, there is no doubt that still greater promptitude could often be obtained, and greater secrecy in the first instance, which is a desirable element in the affair, if the water-police had a small gunboat of their own. Whenever, one of the naval gunboats may be seen getting up steam, the Chinese interested in her movements may be pretty sure that she is after pirates, but if there was a gunboat belonging to the colony she would no doubt be getting up steam so often for the manifold purposes to which she would be applied, that no suspicions would be aroused by the proceedings. Greatly reduced as piracy in this neighbourhood has been of late years it is obvious that it can never die out altogether under a Government like that of the Chinese, and there is as much necessity now,—there will continue to be as much necessity, for a colonial gunboat, for some time to come,—as there was two years ago. When it was proposed to establish such a vessel before, the idea broke down in consequence of the unfair control over her movements which was to be reserved to the naval authorities. The colony was to pay for her, but was not to have command over her. If, however, it should now be decided to increase the efficiency of the water police, we do not see how any difficulties could arise respecting the control of any vessel which might be purchased for that purpose. Any craft which belongs to a definite department of the Government, is too far removed from the observation of supreme authorities to be claimed in any way by them. When the former proposal was on foot, it was a proposal as far as it went, to establish a Hongkong navy. The navy would only have consisted of one gunboat, but still it would have been a separate department. There was no attempt made, however, that we are aware of, on the part either of the Admiralty at home, the senior naval officer on this station, or Her Majesty's Secretary of State, to assume any rights or privileges in connexion with that great and noble vessel,—famous as she has always been,—the Preposterous. The Preposterous belongs to the Harbour-master's department, and does not excite the jealousy of the Admiral. We imagine that a small gunboat attached to the Water-police might also be suffered to lead a modest but useful existence, without being an object of contention between the Colonial Government and the naval authorities.

THE presence in the colony of an artist who is likely for the first time to give a worthy interpretation in Europe of the physical characteristics of this country, suggests the revival of an old proposal to infuse a new element of intellectual refinement into the life of this eminently commercial community, by organising picture exhibitions once a year. The facility with which this could be done now, is much greater than when the project was first suggested, because the direct steamers round the Cape would offer increased facilities for the transport of pictures. It is not to be expected that artists of the first rank would send their works out here, but pictures of high merit would be sent out if the arrangements were well organised; of that anyone familiar with the artistic world of London will be perfectly sure. An Art Society of some kind once set on foot here could manage the whole affair with very little trouble or expense. One of the first rate picture dealers at home could be the agent in London, and the only expense would be the cost of freight and insurance. The City Hall will be finished next winter, and could afford accommodation which would do splendidly for a gallery, and in all probability the admission money paid to the exhibitions would cover all the expenses. The climatic difficulties are not insuperable. In the first place, during the winter there is nothing in the climate of Hongkong injurious to paintings, and even during weather like this which we have been having lately, there is no bad influence which cannot be counteracted easily by a little care and attention. If the thing were only once started the community would wonder how it could possibly have allowed so many prosperous years to go by without organising an Art Society. The exhibitions once established as the fashion here, would be indispensable. When we asserted, a long time ago, that a large hotel would be eagerly made use of in Hongkong, and that many junior messes would be broken up in its favour if one were established, we were met by derisive and scornful assertions that nothing of the kind would do in Hongkong. Events have proved that our friends were not sufficiently imaginative. So it would be with an art exhibition. The idea is thought to be ridiculous, simply because it has never been carried out hitherto. People who have been in business in China for a long time, hardly realise how very desirable it is that some new mental influence outside those of commerce should be infused into the life of this place.

The Yung-kil-un, from Calcutta, brings no later telegrams than those we have already taken from the Bombay papers, brought on by the mail.

Police Intelligence, 3rd July.

BEFORE R. W. GOODLAKE, Esq.

SOLDIERS AND POLICE.

Two soldiers of the 29th Regiment of native infantry were charged with assaulting Sergeant Kader Khan, 150, and P.C. 350 (Indian).

The first complainant (the sergeant) said about nine o'clock yesterday morning he was at the door of Station No. 4 (Canton-bazaar), and the two defendants were standing in the Barrack doorway, a little way off. The first defendant used very bad language to him, and threatened him with a bayonet. He went to the second defendant and asked for the other's number, but they said to him "go away, you policeman." He was then struck on the face and pushed into the gutter. A constable who came up to his assistance was also assaulted. An officer of the prisoners' regiment coming up ended the affair.

P.C. 350 said yesterday he heard someone calling out for help near the Barracks, he ran up and saw several soldiers assaulting the sergeant. Both defendants were there, and were assaulting the sergeant. He was then assaulted himself, his face being slapped, and afterwards his turban torn off his head, put round his neck, and himself dragged into the Barrack-room. He lost a locket worth about $7. He produced some hair which had been torn from his whiskers.

Inspector Grimes said the soldiers of the 29th Regiment gave a great deal of trouble, and he was obliged to put extra constables on duty near the Barracks. They molested Chinese females going along the road. They were also very rude to the police.

Mr. Goodlake said it was very evident that a violent and unprovoked assault had been committed. The prisoners would be fined $50, or two months' imprisonment each, and would have to give $7 amends to constable 350, or a further seven days' imprisonment each.

A COMMON THIEF.

Sin-a-fook, a disreputable-looking Chinaman, was charged with stealing certain articles of clothing from Mr. Sharp's horse-coolie.

It appears that the horse coolie went out, leaving the gardener in charge, and while the latter had left the vicinity of the stables to do a little garden's pidgun," the prisoner crept into the stables and purloined some clothes (produced). The above-mentioned gardener found the prisoner concealed on the premises, and called for help, when a body of Mr. Sharp's retainers rushed out and secured the fellow. On the horse-coolie returning, the clothes found on the prisoner were identified.

The prisoner admitted the charge, having nothing to say in defence; so His Worship sentenced him to three months' imprisonment with hard labour, and informed him at the same time that a recommendation would be sent to the Governor advising that he be deported. Mr. Sharp appeared during the hearing of the case.

A DANGEROUS FRIEND.

William McCloud, a seaman, unemployed, was charged with stealing two shirts from another seaman.

Henry Crawley, a seaman, unemployed, said the prisoner and himself were staying at Black-wood's boarding-house, and yesterday he discovered, on opening his chest, that he had lost two shirts. He did not at first suspect the prisoner, but when he found his shirts at a shop in Lascar-row and the shopkeeper intimated that he had bought them of a man like the prisoner, he had him recognised, and then gave him into custody.

Ho a-sze, the shopkeeper, above mentioned, recognised the prisoner as the man who had sold him the shirts (produced).

Mr. Goodlake said it was a very bad case, one seaman stealing from another in a boarding-house. Prisoner must go to prison for four months with hard labour.

Supreme Court.

CRIMINAL SESSIONS.

BEFORE CHIEF-JUSTICE SMALE.

The sessions were opened yesterday morning at ten o'clock, and the four men belonging the U.S. Flagship Piscataqua, charged with cutting and wounding, were placed at the bar. The Attorney-General said that, having regard to all the circumstances of this case, that it had been a drunken row in a grog shop, as well as the fact, that the prisoners had already been a considerable time in prison, he had come to the conclusion that perhaps the requirements of justice would be met by not prosecuting, and accordingly he enter. d a nolle prosequi.

The Chief-Justice said the prosecutor had certainly shown very great mercy towards the prisoners. They had been concerned in a most disgraceful row, and one in which death might have ensued. They ought to feel what great favor had been shown them by the prosecution and take a warning from the narrow escape they had just had. Had they been found guilty, he should have been obliged to pass upon them a severe sentence, and they were liable had they been found guilty to three years' penal servitude. He hoped in future they would be warned to come on shore without their knives. The men were accordingly discharged.

Mr. Pollard, instructed by Mr. Gaskell, appeared for the prisoners.

On account of the indisposition of the Attorney-General, the sessions were adjourned until this morning at ten o'clock.

The following jury were drawn to serve to-day, John Roohe, J. B. Murcia, A. M. da Silva, J. F. da Costa, T. Howard, T. Morgan, J. Rickett.

The Church of England.

The Times begins a leading article as follows:—"It would be unbecoming, and evidently useless, to criticize the proceedings by which the Church of England hopes to defend itself against a siege every day threatening to pass from a blockade to an assault. In these matters it is usually assumed that every body best understands its own interests, and how best it can accomplish its objects or avert its dangers. The truth is that the Church of England has not much liberty of action nor variety of resources. She is necessarily a creature of habit and custom, and can only do as she has been wont to do, with just an accommodation to circumstances, and now and then a slight exaggeration of manner. She has enjoyed for two centuries a legal and undisputed ascendancy, which has superseded the need of active and original measures, and, indeed, she has not been able to adapt her policy, or vary her routine, had she desired it ever so much, or had there been the organisation which could express the wish, or even form it. All she can do is at the same time, all she has done for generations past. She, or her friends, can hold meetings under various circumstances, altering the place, and running changes on the personages. The least attempt to stretch the tether had ended in embarrassment, if not discredit. The Pan-Anglican Synod had only one object, and in that it failed. We beg its pardon, perhaps it had two objects, and achieved the dignity of two failures. The scheme for a more distinct affiliation and government of the Colonial Churches has resulted in the establishment of one which is decidedly schismatical, and in five Colonial Sees vacant at this day. If it was also intended to strengthen the union between the English and Irish Churches, that has resulted in a second failure. So nothing is left but the old routine of meetings, deputations, and addresses. The Bishops appeal to Oxford and Cambridge for the defence of their Order, and Oxford and Cambridge appeal to the Archbishop to save them from unbelief, heresy, and Dissent. Only the other day the Primate had to invoke the aid of the Lord Mayor, and we should not be surprised to find the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council going in procession to Lambeth to seek the aid of the pastoral staff for their civic monopoly. It would be cruelty or an impertinence to observe that the Primate won't be able to do more for the Universities than they can do for themselves. An address must be written, subscribed, and presented to somebody or other. No doubt, the Primate is the man to receive it.

Ballast.

(From the "Saturday Review.")

A man who wants ballast is considered, in England at any rate, and to some extent in other countries also, to be deficient in almost the central quality of a good human character. To be without talent, without intellectual adroitness, without a rigorous and accurate judgment—any of these things is to be forgiven; but to have it said of you that you do not carry enough ballast is to be made an outlaw from the good opinion of the entire well-to-do class of the community, just as, on the other hand, if it be known that one carries the regulation quantity of this desirable commodity, it is supposed that the regulation quantity of all other virtuous things goes along with it. Perceiving this, men may well be anxious to find out the exact constituents of so valuable a possession, and to study those types of character in which it exists in the amplest abundance, as well as those dreadful examples who have acquired least of it. In its literal use, the term that has been given to this indispensable treasure means rubbish which a ship carries for want of a more remunerative freight; and it cannot be denied that, in its moral and metaphysical application, it seems very often to mean a parcel of trumpery qualities of mind only useful in filling up empty space into which the owner had nothing better to stow. Even in its best sense, some taint of its origin still clings to the phrase, and on closer examination we find that, where praise is most warmly heaped upon a man for the quantity of ballast he carries, it only signifies that he has filled up some spare stowage room with notions or habits not positively vicious. Ballast is often some odourless collection of things present in the mind, which do not fertilize nor quicken nor stimulate it, but lie like a dead lump at the bottom of the hold, only with certain beneficial steadying effects. And this is all very well, if it were not that such a steadying effect could generally be obtained by the possession of qualities which, besides keeping a man's course straight and trim, would also do something to help him more rapidly and effectually forwards. It is certainly better that he should carry a dead bulk, even of some useless sort, than that he should go to the bottom—to ruin, that is to say, and misery and degradation—for want of it. It is better that he should hate zeal, detest new ideas, abhor enterprise, and hold tight to the great gospel of jog-trot, than that he should run a-muck through a hundred vagaries and chimeras and ardent enthusiasms. Often, ballast means no more than adherence to routine; it implies a contrast between the steady-headed man who will not move on, and his rival who wants to fly forward as on the wings of the wind, very severely to the disadvantage of the latter. The Don Quixote in real life would be assuredly charged with want of ballast, and the charge would mean that he lacked Philosopher Square's sense of the fitness of things; that he lived in dreams and books and aspirations instead of in realities, that his mansion was in truth in the skies and not on the terrestrial globe, and that, like a wasp bubble, he only mounted higher than his brother mortals because he happened to be less weighted with brains. The danger of the temperament which makes people cry out for ballast is that it constantly misleads them into the dreadfully common blunder of supposing that mere heaviness or dulness or even absence of brain is tantamount to ballast, and is the guarantee for straight and steady sailing. And, as a matter of fact, there are a great many sets and circles of folk where to say of anybody that he is a clever man is to fasten on him at the same moment the imputation of being a creature liable to be tossed to some spiritual Davy Jones's locker by the first heavy wind that should seize him—like a ship setting forth with all manner of gay flags and pennons, and crowd of ornamental packages on deck, but without a ton of stuff down in the hold. He who is weighty with dulness is supposed to possess, in the long run, clear superiority in the wear and tear of life over the quick-headed man—an opinion whose wide acceptance can only be explained by the notorious fact that people will suffer themselves to be misled into believing things on the strength of a metaphorical expression, which they would not think of believing if they went straight to life for their opinion. All sorts of notions of solidity and safety and steadiness have gathered round the name of ballast; dulness and ponderosity are identified with ballast; ergo, the heavy man must be solid and steady and safe. Actual observation would rather show that excess of heaviness is less to be relied upon for keeping a man out of scrapes and misfortunes than intellectual acuteness is to be relied upon for extricating him from them, even if it has been the means of plunging him in. To take an instance from the high historic region, Louis XI. was extraordinarily wanting in reticence, unfailing self-control, solid veracity, and most other qualities which are believed to be essential to the success of a man's schemes; he constantly betrayed himself into serious blunders, yet so remarkable was his adroitness in pulling himself out, that when he had done so, he seemed to be in a better position than safer men would have held if they had made no blunders. And on a lower plane of action one may see the same thing. Men who, to the cool eye of prudence, seem to be utterly devoid of steadiness, and solidity of purpose, yet by dint of exceeding dexterity and intrepidity of mind scale peaks of success to which persons more heavily ballasted would never dream of aspiring. Does not one see successful men in abundance who, so far from humbly courting Fortune, daily with her as mistress, and defy all the rules which the wise have laid down for those who would win her favours? They throw up safe certainties in the way of income and office, mark out careers for themselves such as no prudent man ever marked out before, plunge into unpioneered courses, and embrace unpopular causes; yet at the end it appears as though they had made for their goal as straight as the crow flies, and as steadily as a locomotive on a railroad. Of ballast in the usual sense they give no sign of having ever possessed a single ounce. Notwithstanding, if ballast be the condition of success that people are fond of supposing it to be, they must have had at least some efficient substitute for it.

And indeed it is clear that steadiness of purpose and real soundness of view may be secured either by heaviness of soul, or by swiftness and precision of sight, through which a man steering straight to aims visible enough to himself appears in the blinder eyes of neighbours to be drifting away into clouds. Prudence obviously depends on a man's power. It is very rash in a weak person to strain himself by walking thirty miles the first day of his tour, though a strong one might do it without receiving any hurt. So in more important branches of conduct than pedestrianism. What would be mere flightiness in mediocrity is cool sagacity in genius; what would be windy madness in a man without a strong will and a clear intelligence becomes the plain and direct path to another man with them. This is true in all sorts of fields—in political trade, authorship, and everything else in which there is room enough for us to measure the difference between a big man and a little one. To possess a due stock of ballast is, after all, only to have a due knowledge of oneself, one's own powers and position, and of the conditions of the task to be achieved. No one virtue—not prudence, nor circumspection, nor thrift, nor perseverance—contains an adequate account of what it is that one understands or ought to understand by ballast. Not even the union of all these is an adequate account of it. It is possible to be very thrifty and very persevering, and so forth, and still to be wrongly ballasted; because even virtues, unless they are in nice proportion and of just application to the circumstances, are not any more likely to lead one to a successful end than so many downright vices. If a man has got into a bad groove, everybody will admit that ballast in the shape of perseverance, or the quality of not knowing when he is beaten, only does him harm. Yet it often happens that what looks like flightiness is in fact only wise and dexterous shifting out of a groove whose goal is more visible to the apparently flighty than to the apparently sage person. The only property on which you can confidently rely is clearness and acuteness of understanding, because this cannot exist in excess; whereas steadiness, not seldom a euphemism for sheer ponderosity of intelligence, may easily reach such a quantity in a man as to hold him back from moving, or even to sink him.

Generally, perhaps, the complaint of want of ballast resolves itself into an accusation against the will; it is the will which is caught and tossed about by the winds either of passion or of intellectual caprice. One is at liberty, perhaps, according to the unwritten code prescribed by society for persons who aspire to its approval, to indulge in caprice of vision; but in caprice of purpose, never. To change your opinions, your notions of means, is not incompatible with success; nay, as we have seen, is sometimes an indispensable condition of it. The unpardonable sin is to waver in purpose, to hesitate among a fatal variety of ends. This is to be unballasted indeed. The man who desires one year to be a member of Parliament, the next to compose a philosophic treatise, or to make a fortune in the City, or to found a new religion, who never knows his own mind as to the kind of success which he either desires or is capable of achieving, this is the man whom the world rightly holds cheapest. Only a shade less ridiculous is the kindred spirit who, knowing what sort of fame or achievement he would like, and could reach with endeavour, is once or twice a year seized with what he takes for a philosophic estimate of the value of success—that is to say, is paralysed with the notion that the game is not worth the candle, and so gives rein to indolence or divided purpose. It is the waste in such a character as this, often the most admirable in other respects, that makes the moralists of the parlour cry out for more ballast in the world. Even here, however, there is some reason for thinking that the want is an intellectual defect, an imperfection of clear vision, which thus spreads into the moral region of the will.

Political Adventurers.

(From the "Pall Mall Gazette.")

The odium which is attached in England to anybody who has the slightest suspicion about him of being an adventurer is so intense that people ought to have a very clear idea of what it is that they mean when they apply so corroding and destructive an epithet to their enemies or friends. The political, clerical, or literary adventurer is so much disliked or despised in this character, that one ought to know with some precision the sort of qualities which distinguish him from other people of an objectionable kind. It is tolerably easy to describe the radical feature of an adventurer, but the difficulty, and very often the injustice, of the current use of the word resides in the process of recognizing the outward and visible signs of this radical ingredient of a man's character. Adventurer may be defined roughly and familiarly as a person who seeks to push his fortunes by the profession of principles that have no deeper hold upon his mind than his own convenience may happen to give them; one who is inspired by no disinterested convictions of such strength that they might be relied on under ever so small pressure to override his sense of his own immediate advantage. Some individuals of this wretched species give us an easy opportunity of fixing on their note. There are persons who grow in the privacy of friendship that they follow their profession with a view to the loaves and fishes, and that they follow one set of doctrines rather than another because preferment seems to lie on this side rather than on that. In like manner, there are men who obviously seek to marry women nominally from affection, really from lust for a fortune; and journalists who advocate views which they repudiate privately, but which bring certain substantial rewards to their literary champions; and members of Parliament who cynically reveal to their intimates that they have taken up patriotism because patriotism pays. Most adventurers, however, are too discreet, and understand their trade a great deal too well, to indulge in this detestable frankness of exposure. The adventurer, as a rule takes good care to steer clear as well as he possibly can of any overt disclosure of the selfishness which the whited sepulchre of his professed principles is contrived at once to conceal and to promote. And the result of this is to make it very difficult for us to be quite sure when we have found him out. The public has taken a too rough and ready method of unearthing the class. They believe most people to be adventurers who, not being rich nor patrician, aspire to a position in the world away from the beaten commercial and professional tracks. Nearly anybody who seeks to climb by virtue of brains only to the heights which have usually been reached either by money or by rank is set down more or less confidently in the ignoble lines. To be clever, poor, and ambitious is to unite the three qualities which those who make up the world's chorus dislike, despise and fear when found singly, but which when all three co-exist in one person they view with a distrust and aversion that are positively deadly. To express this animosity there is no designation so easily bestowed, and at the same time so thoroughly effective as that of an adventurer. That the object of it should be poor gives the application of the name a plausible colour; that he should be clever gives it a sting, because somehow or another have persuaded the loudest and silliest part of the world in a consolatory manner that brains and honesty usually stand in inverse ratio to one another; that he should be notoriously ambitious inspires a due amount of apprehension and alarm. If the so-called adventurer have chosen politics for his field, his position in the eyes of men become a terrible one in his own eyes it becomes amazingly doubtful and uncomfortable, if he should happen not to be an adventurer after all, but a sincere and single-minded person of genuine purity of purpose and principle. All men but the very strongest are wonderfully impressed if they find that the world has unanimously pronounced upon their character. It is true of men with robust and insensible natures that "On vaut ce qu'on veut valoir;" but then a man may be very excellent and worthy without being either robust or insensible, and in this case he may be really persuaded that after all, if the world says that he is an adventurer, there must be something in an accusation that is vouched for by such influential authority.

One effect of this may be noticed in the nervous reluctance of many admirably qualified men to go into public life. Heaven knows we do not want a Parliament of professors, but it is impossible not to see that to deter poorish men with only professional incomes from trying to enter the House of Commons by stigmatizing them as adventurers is to help to exclude a most useful element in the composition of a deliberative body. Apart from this, let us observe the injustice as well as the rudeness of the conclusion that a man is probably unprincipled or weak-kneed in attempting to serve his country, unless he has either a large independent income or else belongs to an old and titled family with official connections. Is not the House of Commons at this moment thronged with adventurers both of the wealthy and of the noble sort? Unless rumour be very false, it will not be the claims of plebeian aspirants to office that Mr. Gladstone will find it embarrassing to adjust, but rather the eager pretensions of patricians who went into Parliament with a view to office, and who would as lief their party were kept in the cold shade of opposition and their principles left in abeyance as that either should triumph without some of the spolia opima falling to themselves. Yet one does not hear the hated term applied to younger sons and elder sons of noble houses. Then, the wealthy merchant who covets a seat, and pays for one, not because he cares particularly about politics nor is anxious for one set of principles rather than for other, but simply because he aspires to possess certain social advantages, to be turned from a mere mortal into a baronet, or to be asked to houses to which his old friends cannot gain access, why shall not he too be called an adventurer? It may be said that these are checks on the slipperiness, and guarantees for the integrity of people who have what is called a stake in the country, either in the shape of a large fortune or in the honourable traditions of an old family; while in the case of a man with nothing to keep his conscience straight except his brains, nobody knows how little pressure will suffice to make him sell himself. If one looks coolly at this, the assumption on which it proceeds will be found to be very striking indeed, considering facts that are of everyday notoriety. The too evident morality of the City and of commercial centres generally, is not so sweet and fragrant in the nostrils of man that those whose code is drawn from the practices of these busy spots may be relied upon without further certificate or warranty for a firm rig-iron, immovable adherence to honesty, unless there is some reason for believing that a man may be rather "sharp" in commercial transactions, and yet remain the pink of honour in everything else. Younger sons, too, and even elder sons, before and after the transformation which takes them out of the ranks of sons, are much maligned if their needfulness does not often drive them into queer conduct on the turf, in joint-stock companies, and elsewhere. Now of the three we suspect that the man who is an adventurer on the strength of his ability is a safer as well as a more likeable person than either the man who relies on his cash or the other who relies on his blood and his connections for the exploitation of the credulous public. Apart from facts, is there not a certain baseness in the presumption that because a man is neither wealthy nor patrician, therefore he is more likely than not to misuse his capacity and to be insensible to anything like public spirit or devotion? The cry of adventurer has been raised against more than one statesman of the very first class in genius and patriotism. Honourable Pelhams and Foxes who were jobbing away all the offices of the State did not hesitate to fix the fatal stigma on Burke; Canning was denounced in the same way; so has more than one of the front rank of living statesmen been denounced.

The consolatory thing is that a man soon lives down the cry of this sort which greets him at his first appearance. The presumption may be, and pretty certainly is, against him in the first instance. But character soon begins to tell and character decides. The real adventurer may occasionally dissemble his true obliquity of motive for a great length of time, but not often; for the rogue being "only a fool with a circumbendibus" is seldom thoroughly discreet. The other, whom there is no ground beyond the smallness of his income for calling an adventurer, soon gets opportunities of showing that moderate means, capacity, and honesty may all exist together with a laudable desire to work in the public service.

Independence Day.

To-day being the anniversary of American Independence, the men-of-war and most of the American merchantmen in the harbour are gaily decorated with flags although the weather seems very unpropitious for any display. Outside the store of Messrs. Thos. Hunt and Co. there is also a great show of bunting.

News from the North.

The following items of news are from the North China Daily News of June 26th:—

One of our contemporaries lately gave an imperfect sketch of changes to be soon introduced in the Harbour Master's branch of the Customs service. The actual scheme is, we believe, as follows:—There is to be a Marine Department at Peking, which is to supervise all matters connected with light-houses, port regulations, &c. This is to be presided over by an officer who is expected to arrive shortly from England. Three divisional Inspectors are to be appointed under him. M. Vignier will have charge of the Northern Division, which will include Chefoo (his Head-quarters), Tientsin, and Newchwang. Mr. Hockly will have charge of the Central Division, which will include Shanghai (his Head-quarters), Ningpo, and the Yangtze; Mr. Bisbee will have charge of the Southern Division, which will include Foochow (his Head-quarters), Amoy, and Swatow. Each port is, we believe, to have also a Harbour Master. We hope that, under the new system, steps will be taken to remedy the existing want, in every direction, of lighthouses and buoys.

We hear that the wreck of the Benares has been re-sold for a hundred taels; the original purchaser resiling, apparently, before the difficulties of the task. A practical man, who can himself superintend operations, is the only one likely to make such a speculation pay. Any grand scheme for raising the wreck is likely to result in loss of the money employed. The only chance is to save odds and ends of cargo and gear, that can be got at with tolerable ease.

The wreck of the Benares was again sold on the 20th all in by Auction for Tls. 220. Her career as a wreck threatens to become interesting.

We are glad to learn from our Tientsin correspondent's letter that the Chinese Government have at length determined on employing Mongol cavalry to cope with the mounted hordes of rebels who are devastating the northern provinces.

MARRIED AND NOT MARRIED.—A Bill is passing through Parliament to remedy, as far as may be, in a particular instance, a blunder that ought no longer to be possible. A quarter of a century ago a chapel of ease was built and consecrated in a hamlet in the parish of Sapperton, Gloucestershire, and marriages have been solemnized in this chapel apparently as a matter of course. It turns out, writes the Times, that, in supposing he could legally solemnize marriages because the chapel was consecrated, the clergyman was, to use the language the Bill, "under an erroneous impression." Parliament does from time to time in these cases, as they come to light, the only thing it can do after the event—viz., pass a Bill like this now before it, declaring all the marriages valid; but it is to be hoped that the forthcoming report of the Marriage Law Commission will propose measures for putting an end to this scandal, and enable men and women to know for certain, whether, when they go through the usual ceremonial at a church, they are really married, or whether they are liable to find out years after words, that the clergyman was "under an erroneous impression" when he solemnly pronounced them married. The Frampton Mansel Marriages Bill is the Bill here alluded to.

There has been no change in the Drug market. The following are the ruling prices:—Patna, $635 to $637½; Benares, $622½ to $625; Malwa, $600 to $605.

There is little to report in the market for Piece Goods. Several auction sales of sea-damaged goods has more than satisfied the wants of purchasers. A quantity of Yarn that was offered was only very slightly spotted, and we hear that it brought good average prices. Some T Cloths and Grey Shirtings were also placed at auction, and the consequence has been, not a sale of perfect goods to-day. The only transaction reported to-day, is 600 pairs Blankets 10lbs at $3.25. A small sale of Raw Cotton amounting to 50 bales Bombay Staple, is the only thing done in this Staple. THE Undersigned beg to call the attention of Steamship owners, Engineers, &c., to the

SELF-LUBRICATING STEAM-ENGINE PACKING,

It will not gum nor char; is easy on the rods; keeps them clean and polished; reduces friction; is easily fixed; saves loss of time and waste of material; and, being SELF-LUBRICATING, requires the use of NO GREASE.

The importance of increased durability cannot be over-estimated, while its cheapness, combined with the abovementioned qualities, effects a saving to the consumer of from 100 to 300 per cent.

My "WHEELEREAN HAIR RESTORATIVE!!!" I wish to bring to your notice (a discovery made solely by me), the properties of this most wonderful preparation will, I guarantee, have the desired effects of restoring GREY HAIR to its NATURAL HUE, and at the same time preventing baldness; in all cases of diseased human hair, it is most effective, for it removes the outer and older portions of the epidermis and thus frees the pores of the skin much more completely than any of the Brushes or Gloves now in use.

Mr. WHEELER will be prepared to call at the residence of any Lady or Gentleman requiring his services, who may find it inconvenient to visit the establishment, on receipt of a chit to that effect.

Thanking you for past favors, and trusting to meet with a renewal of the same,

We have the honor to remain, Sir,
Yours very obediently,
F. R. WHEELER,
AND
J. EUZIERE.

FORTY YEARS' USE OF THESE MEDICINES (Morison's Vegetable Universal Medicines) By the public has proved their efficacy and virtues, and the truth of Mr. Morison's system as to the cure of diseases. Being composed only of vegetable matter or medicinal herbs, they are harmless to the most tender age or weakest frame, under every stage of suffering; the most pleasant in their operation; and the most certain in searching out the root of any complaint. Besides cleansing the great highway of the body—the bowels—they act copiously on the kidneys, the liver, and the skin. A sense of relief in the whole system is felt very shortly after they have been taken,—the blood flows more evenly, the heart beats more regularly, and sleep is given to those long deprived of it. The medicines consist of three sorts. No. 1 Morison's Pills; No. 2 Morison's Pills. In boxes at 7½d., 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.; family packets, 11s. each; also the Vegetable Aperient Powders, 1s. 1½d. per box.
